THE ILLUSION

The bedroom of an average teenager can look like a well-planned illusion. The trick to seeing through an illusion is knowing what is used to create that illusion. We recreate a complete typical teenager's bedroom and the first thirty minutes of the program invites the participants to "snoop" through the room to find items and objects that could indicate "risky behavior."

EDUCATION

A PowerPoint presentation will be presented describing each prop that the participants should have located in the room. All props will be explained and described how it could be a tool in a risky behavior. The program will be updated regularly depending on the recent trends and behaviors.

The program is open to adult audiences ONLY. Young people are not permitted in the programs. This program is designed to educate parents on recent trends and to assist their child in finding the proper help if a risky behavior is detected. This program can be presented at any civic organization, parent group, church group, or anyone who thinks this would benefit parents and in the long run, our youth population. This program is presented free of charge by the Fairfax County Police Department's Crime Prevention Unit.
